1909.

MISS GERTRUDE RUSS.

Scripture Reading, REV. W. C. PAYNE.

Hymn, Schubert.

O God, the Rock of Ages
Who evermore hast been,
What time the tempest rages,
Our dwelling-place serene;
Before Thy first creations,
O Lord, the same as now,
To endless generations
The Everlasting Thou!

Our years are like the shadows
On sunny hills that lie,
Or grasses in the meadows
That blossom but to die;
A sleep, a dream, a story
By strangers quickly told,
An unremaining glory
Of things that soon are old.

O Thou, Who canst not slumber,
Whose light grows never pale,
Teach us aright to number
Our years before they fail.
On us Thy mercy lighten,
On us Thy goodness rest,
And let Thy Spirit brighten
The hearts Thyself hast blessed.

Lord, crown our faith's endeavor
With beauty and with grace,
Till, clothed in light forever,
We see Thee face to face;
A joy no language measures;
A fountain brimming o'er;
An endless flow of pleasure;
An ocean without shore.

Prayer, REV. F. C. WILBER.

Sanctus from "St. Cecilia" Mass, Gounod.
UNIVERSITY ORCHESTRA.

Baccalaureate Sermon, "Christianity and Culture,"
REV. HERBERT LOCKWOOD WILLETT, PH. D.,
The University of Chicago.

Hymn, Duke Street.

O God, beneath Thy guiding hand
Our exiled fathers crossed the sea;
And when they trod the wintry strand,
With prayer and psalm they worshipped Thee.

Thou heard'st, well pleased, the song, the prayer;
Thy blessing came; and still its power
Shall onward, through all ages, bear
The memory of that holy hour.

Laws, freedom, truth, and faith in God
Came with those exiles o'er the waves;
And where their pilgrim feet have trod,
The God they trusted guards their graves.

And here Thy name, O God of love,
Their children's children shall adore,
Till these eternal hills remove,
And spring adorns the earth no more.

Benediction, REV. W. W. BOLT.

March, Nessler.
UNIVERSITY ORCHESTRA.

Commencement, 1909

Continuing the practice it has followed since 1907, when the completion of Robinson Gymnasium seemed to make it possible to accommodate all who were likely to ask for admission to the commencement exercises, the University of Kansas issues no special invitation to these exercises this year, but will again attempt to welcome all of its friends who wish to be present on this occasion. It is hoped, however, that others will not feel themselves undervalued or discriminated against if this general announcement singles out for particularly cordial invitation a class whose importance to it the University more and more realizes as the years go by, and one of which it has seen rather less on commencement occasions than it would gladly see. This is that body of men and women who have spent at the University a time longer or shorter, without taking a degree; a class including many of the best citizens of the state and many of the truest friends the University has had or can have. To these, and to all its friends, the University of Kansas extends an invitation to be present at the commencement exercises, which will be held in Robinson Gymnasium, at ten o'clock, Wednesday, June 9, 1909.

Commencement Notes.

COMMENCEMENT TICKETS.

Alumni and former students may obtain tickets, for themselves and friends, to the commencement exercises, upon registration at alumni headquarters, where tickets to the University dinner will also be given out to graduates. The commencement tickets will secure admission to the first floor of the auditorium, where seats will be reserved for a limited time.

Others than those mentioned above will be admitted to commencement exercises so long as any seats, not reserved, remain. Last year, all who came were accommodated. Others than alumni may obtain tickets for the University dinner at the office of the University treasurer, Fraser Hall, price $1.

Evidences of growth are particularly striking at the University now, and will lend unusual interest to the visit of the returning alumnus in June. At the west limits of the campus—unexplored wilderness only a few years ago—is the large new engineering building—completed but not to be occupied until next fall—and the new “saw tooth” power house with its impressive battery of boilers, its turbine and other great engines and machinery. Nearer in is the geology and mining building, in process of construction. In all parts of the campus are evidences of the attempt to beautify the grounds. On the point commanding the beautiful north view, one may see in imagination the administration building which is to cost half a million dollars, and the first wing of which will be erected during the next biennium.

Band music at all hours of the day was a delightful feature of last commencement which will be continued this year. The band is now one of the strong musical organizations of the University, and furnishes the out-door music for commencement.

The business meetings of the Alumni Association grow in importance as the resources of the association increase. This year the question of an alumni building will be paramount. The adoption of some form of affiliate membership for former students—not definitely acted upon last year—will be up for discussion. The time of the meeting will be half-past one, Tuesday, in the lecture room of Snow Hall.

More than two hundred red and blue umbrellas—adopted as the official part of the alumni accouterments for commencement—were carried in the first annual umbrella parade last year. The umbrellas are useful as well as decorative, and are inexpensive. Visiting alumni and former students can provide themselves with this piece of equipment on their way up town from the trains, or at the University.

Instead of the senior farce in Marvin grove in the afternoon, Tuesday, the class will present an operetta at half-past seven in the evening, on the campus west of Fraser Hall.

One of the new features of entertainment which it is hoped may be introduced at the approaching commencement is an afternoon of water sports on the river. If present plans can be carried out, there will be a programme of races—canoe, swimming, boat, and tub—and possibly an illumination of the river at night.

By Robert Wilson Neal, of Class 1898

Gray halls! In our morning, ere springtime was fled,
Bright haunts where our fancy was led,
The home of our Muses, the hills of our Gods,
Where spirit breathed life into clods—
Gray piles, and deserted though thronged round with feet,
In exile, in absence, we greet.

On pedestal hillside faith-reared and high-set,
O Symbol, our hearts hail thee yet:
The voices about thee, alas! are too new,
Their farewells too young to be true.
O mistress of longing, young steps gladly stray,
'Tis hearts after exile turn back.

Glad birth-place of love-dreams, fair nourice of truth,
Clings sweetly about thee thy youth;
Green ivy enwraps thee, deep valleys embrace
In riches thy rock-founded base.
Yet thy beauties are fairer as seen through the years,
Since exile has taught our hearts tears.

TUNE: "Believe me if all those endearing young charms."
(NOTE: In singing, repeat the last two lines of each stanza.)

HISTORY OF THE CLASS OF 1909

CLAUD A. CLAY

The other day as I was about to go into the library to prepare for a final series of quizzes, some mysterious force stopped me, and started in my mind an uncontrollable longing to see North Hollow, and to ramble around for a few minutes in the beautiful sunshine of a superb summer day. The sensation was most delicious, and I must confess, I didn't even try to resist the temptation to forget my studies.

The walk to the edge of the wildson the campus was magnificent. The intoxication of the moment grew on me as I walked. I dared not analyze my feelings too closely, for fear I should find the cause of my exhilaration only trivial and earthly. Something was responsible for my mood. What, I did not care. Perhaps it was the chain of hills clouded with a blue haze far to the north, or perhaps it was the mysterious force that gently urged me on. At all events, I went.

After entering the wood and resting my study-tired brain with glimpses of refreshing green leaves, which were rustling in rollicking abandon on the trees above, I started on the depths of the grove, but was stopped by a sight most wierd and startling. The influence of summer was playing a trick on me, I thought. Unable to move, I yielded to the spell, and sank with a sigh on the grass that carpeted the ground beneath. Rip Van Winkle's vision in the Catskills was nothing compared to mine. In the wonderment of it all, I forgot my everyday surroundings and weary knowledge of flunks and cranky profs.

Starting from the thick brambles near the Chemistry building came a long line of people. I had stopped in the corner near the Golf Links, and had plenty of time to study them as they slowly approached.

Their appearance was odd and picturesque. They marched in single file and were divided into groups like soldiers in a company. The first divisions were formed by old men and women who waved queer banners in the air and shouted hoarse sounds. As they drew nearer I could distinguish the figures on the banners. Some were labeled "1873," "1875" and "1879;" others bore the emblems, "Rah! Rah! For Fraser Hall," "Hooray for Old K. U." My excitement increased when I saw them at closer range.

The line had now reached me, and the leader, an old man with snow white hair, was bowing and smiling before me. For a moment he paused and threw me a paper. I eagerly snatched it from the ground and found that it was The Hierophantes, an early sheet published at the University. Glancing hastily at the headlines, I read, "North Hollow Popular," "Students Enjoy Rambles in the Woods," "Enrollment Now 200." I would willingly have read on, but the noisy, clamoring crowd again claimed my attention.

The numerals were increasing now and the banners were becoming brighter and more up-to-date. As each person passed, he threw me something and smiled amusedly at my perplexity. Sometimes it was a poem, then a book, or perhaps the picture of a huge steel bridge, or a magnificent hospital. Selections of music, newspapers, specimens of every art and science known to man fell on the glistening heap.

As the line advanced the people grew less old-fashioned, but none the less interesting. As the numerals, "05," "06" and "07" flashed into view I began to recognize some old friends. The sonorous tones of Rock Chalk, Jay Hawk thrilled me through. Then lo! with beaming faces and flowing gowns, the boys and girls of 1909 went past yelling lustily, "Wash 'em out, wring 'em out, hang 'em on a line, Rock Chalk, Jay Hawk, 1909!" My heart leaped up as I heard the cry for I knew then of a truth that it was the congregation of '09, the greatest and best, the class that made K. U. famous.

When the last of the line had gone, I tried to decide what it all could mean. Before I could make my puzzled brain do its office, the old man who had led the procession, stood again in front of me. Looking up in amazement, I saw the line returning. This time it did not pass, but formed in a circle that grew in size as each new recruit stepped into the ranks. When the ring was at last complete, the old man of '73 joined hands with the girl of '09 and stepped out into the space in front of me.

"My son," he said, "here you can see the Alpha and Omega of K. U. life. The bravest of the brave and the fairest of the fair." Here he made an elaborate bow to the girls of '09. Those in the ring cheered gleefully at his gallantry.

"In this heap," he continued, "you see the wonderful achievements of the sons and daughters of the University of Kansas. In this very place, this beloved North Hollow, they received their inspiration. The map of the world, the destiny of nations, and the history of mankind have been changed by the influence of this sacred place. And the greatest of accomplishments which this beloved spot has brought about is this."

Reaching in his pocket, he pulled out a marriage license and threw it on the heap. "North Hollow, or Marvin Grove as it now has the honor to be called, I believe, is the cause that has induced the husbands of the past and present to invest in this desirable bit of paper. Judging by the signs I now see, many others will some day make the same investment."

Turning from me to the group of seniors in the ring, the old man continued his talk.

“We, the alumni of this school, greet with pleasure a most remarkable class. During your four years of work here you have unconsciously been making history. It has been unobserved by you since history is never noticed by its makers. But we on the outside have heard of many wonderful things. Four years ago you came here bewildered, unacquainted freshmen, the butt of rude jokes and proclamations of impolite upper classmen. The record was ahead to be made or marred. It is now finished, marred it is true, in many places, but all the more worthy for its scars since they were made in hard fought struggles to overcome obstacles that stood in the path of success. Today you appear dignified and experienced in all the mysteries of higher education, with a record unequalled in all lines of University activity, In society, in athletics and in scholarship you have out distanced all past attempts. Your opportunities have been great, and you have improved them to the utmost.

Your parents heard with pride that you, as freshmen, signed the Treaty of Peace that abolished the barbarous scraps that were becoming a serious menace to the success of securing large appropriations from the legislature. The never-defeated, ever-victorious, never-scored-on freshman football team of '09, captained by the staunch hearted Veatch, was a record in itself. The names of Crowell, Wood, Reed, Carlson, Hennessy, Pleasant, Rice and Houghton as representatives of '09 among the Ever Victors of this season are a just cause for pride. In track, baseball and basketball the record of the class has been none the less enviable.

The scholastic ability of the class is the talk of the state. The number of Phi Beta Kappas, Sigma Xis, brilliant orators, of boys and girls with dramatic and artistic talent, of those whose success in music is assured, of the representatives of every possible form of intellectual activity, makes a brilliant example for other classes to strive after, but one hard to equal and impossible to surpass.

In society the brilliant social functions given by the class have acted as eclipses of the other trials in that field. We heard with amusement of the freshmen spreads that you gave your first year. You will pardon the reference to those crude days, when I tell of the furore your Sophomore created not only in the minds of the guests here in school, but in every home where its brilliancy has been related. Way back there three years ago when Ernest Skofstad was president, Harry Armsby was vice-president, Zella Mitchell, secretary and Carl Pleasant, your dignified president of today, was the humble and trusted treasurer, you were able to give a Sophomore that is still talked about here and elsewhere.

Your Junior Prom is worthy of a special chapter by itself. With Archie, as president, to lead the grand march, and Lusk, Mildred McCurdy and Pleasant, again, as the other class officers, aided by a host of willing workers and a most entrancing number of society belles from '09 to grace with their presence the beautifully decorated hall, what else could the Prom be but a grand success, the pinnacle of all social events at K. U.?

Then in this year—your last—the social events have assumed an air of mature dignity known only to those who really have had the experience and who have been there before. The Senior play, first of all, was in a class by itself. The wierd name, Izmiena—puzzling to those not versed in dramatic lore, is enough of itself to give dignity to any performance. The committee, Faragher, Manley, Weaver, Thomas, Poindexter, Naramore and Wattles—nothing could come from their pens, but excellence. The players—amateurs only in experience, delighted their audience during their two nights stand. In fact the senior play of 1909 was a success. Then the Jayhawker, Volume IX; the book on which Krehbiel, Evans, Weaver and committee labored so faithfully, is by universal public acclamation the best book ever produced at K. U. That is the verdict of the state in reference to your Annual. You have a just right to be proud to call it your own. It is useless to attempt to name all your achievements in the social line. Physical endurance cannot stand the task, neither can memory perform the office of retaining all the facts.

One thing more that makes '09 distinctive. The girls—Lucy and Amarette, Frances and Mildred, Betty and Katherine, Alma and Alice, Nola and Grace, Amy and Mable, Jessie and Georgia, Maybeth and Blanche, Lola and Ruby, Gertrude and Sybil and the scores of other fair ones—have worked nobly for the glory of the class. We on the outside have heard all about them. We know about the party they gave for the senior boys and how grateful the young gentlemen were for the favor; of the tea given to the faculty ladies, for the aid of which the boys of the class so liberally voted $15.00; of the suffragette movement to free the downtrodden sex; of the women's student council that is to solve all the problems of the future; of the mid-week date rules, which the Senior girls have kept so faithfully, of the many parties made delightful by their presence, of the hearts they have gladdened and those they have saddened; and all the other things they have done, I repeat, we have heard of them out in the world. Truly the '09 girls are a remarkable bunch."

With a flourish of the hand the old man closed his talk and once more joined the ranks of the seniors and alumni who departed singing "Crimson and Blue."

While gazing fascinated at the disappearing throng, I was startled to consciousness by the noise of the noon whistle. Scrambling hastily to my feet I hurried guiltily to lunch.

Although seen and heard in a dream I knew that I had the real and authentic history of the class of 1909, and for that reason I have given it to you today

Our history is nearly ended and we are fast approaching the ranks of the has-beens. Then, with a knowledge of failures and successes, of the stings of disappointments, of the joys of achievements, of unrealized high-school ambitions, with pain and pleasure intermingled, let us leave our Alma Mater with a satisfied remembrance that we have really been a vital part of this great school, that, we have really made history here, and that, in after years, 'let come what come may,' we can tell with delight what we did at K. S. U.

PROPHECY FOR THE CLASS OF 1909

LUCY J. WRIGHT

MY CLASSMATES:

I come here doubtfully, fearfully. I come to meet disapproval, scorn—to see coldness and distrust creep into your eyes. For well I know the solemn truth—"a prophet is without honor," and yet, I come to bring a message.

True, I have seen you listen to the great Claud Clay with due respect, but yet I tremble for my own reception, for every man loves and has reverence for the tale of his own deeds, while he will jeer at visions of his future, and yet history is a dead thing and prophecy the first quivering of life! And so I come to face your skepticism and your boasted materialism, that I may spread before you a wonderful picture of the life that is to be, trusting that I shall find sympathy and belief in some of the more luminous and less confused souls before me.

From you the future years are hidden, but I, a prophet, can part the veils that conceal them from your view and step into a bright beyond. With closed eyes I move through them—five, ten, fifteen, twenty years hence.

I see a stately city, built on a hill, for its founders learned to climb at college. It is called Mt. Pleasant in honor of a man famous at its founding, but in the short twenty years since that time his fame has sunk into oblivion and there is left only the legend that he was once a football hero and a second Chesterfield.

This city was geometrically planned and eccentrically constructed by K. U. engineers. Their mistakes are partially covered by the endeavors of the Ornamental Design and Free Hand Drawing people, and gracious time will do the rest.

The streets are broad and firmly built, having been planned by Contractor Tubius Reed to suit his own ideas of size and stability, and are lighted by a system of radium bulbs, a system that made Ben Hennessy rich. The water is supplied by fountains of chemically pure H₂O prepared by the great chemist Faragher.

Parks and squares with soft green grass, arranged for every comfort, have been laid out by Frank Tyler, Fred Busch and Merle Groene of the long established Company of the Knights of Rest.

In the center of the city stands the court house, which is considered the master-piece of Architect Skofstad, and on the square opposite is the Thespian-Masque play house, where tonight the renowned tragedian, Billy Rice, is to appear.

Two blocks away is the Government Building, where a marvellous system of pneumatic tubes, distributes the mail to the homes and business houses of the city. This system was devised by the wearied men who delivered The Kansan while in college.

Nearby is the one church of the city, the church of consolidated creeds, where every worshipper is guaranteed three thousand feet of fresh air per minute, and hygienic contribution baskets, a new one for every contributor. People go to church often because it is compulsory to have your religion in your own name, and because this is the one place where you do not have to answer wireless telegraphy calls. The Rev. Merle Prunty is preaching a series of sermons here on "Success by Magnetism," but can hardly be heard because so many of the congregation carry in their vest pockets the latest noisy craze, the talking postal card, patented by Tom Gowenlock.

The bank of the city is controlled by the capable financier, Bert Evans, ably assisted by August Krehbiel.

Among the leading merchants are: Ed Emmet, Insurance & Loan Co.; George March, Grocer; Cecil Fay, Haberdasher; Alice Asher, Baker; Sybil Betts, Confectioner; Ethel Bennett, Hair Dresser and Beauty Specialist; Winifred Alexander, Milliner; Hubert DeTinsley Steeper, Bookseller; Shorty Corwine, Druggist; Buster Brown, Restaurant; Gertrude Copley, Photographer; and

Dutch Ahlborn, Owner of the Nickles and Laughing Galleries

The school system is most perfect, with Willard A. Wattles as superintendent, assisted by Nelle Everett and Swede Carlson.

There is no police force, for Mt. Pleasant is far famed for peace, order and brotherly love. Here Engineer and Law walk arm in arm, "frat" and "barb" trust one another, Y. M. C. A. and T. N. E. join forces, Phi Beta Kappa and flunker understand each other; why here even is a Beta-Sigma Chi syndicate.

And whence comes this perfect government, so long sought by nations and cities? Surely 'tis not due to the Good Government Club or Student Government Associations. No, the Equal Suffrage League has come into her own. Even now I see the people enthusedly waving their hands and craning their necks to look into the sky at a brilliant white flying machine draped with the civic colors, crimson and blue. They know it is their commissioners, Jessie Baldrige and Maybeth Parker, out for a morning fly, in which they are accompanied by the illustrious diplomat, the Honorable Archibald Naramore, present minister to Mars.

Many of the people in the streets are familiar. That man whose eyes follow the big white machine with such adoration is Leonard Pulliam. Those who seem to disparage the veneration of the multitude are Pat Crowell and the other Laws.

That solemn man with deeply drawn brows and distorted mouth is the noble philosopher, Marlin Hatfield Poindexter.

This busy group whose fingers are wiggling so rapidly are reporters with the new automatic machines that make type while they report. They are writing up the commissioners' aeroplane trip for the Scoop Club Review, Mt. Pleasant's celebrated paper, which I know is edited by Henry Clay Waters.

In the distance, far away from the toil and tumult, the pomp and vainty of the city streets stand the quiet and beautiful suburban homes of the Lusks, the Taylors, the Pearsons, the Ainsworths, the Perrys and many more happy couples.

But there are sad sights in this city too. I see a plain white monument, whose inscription reads, "Here on April 1st, perished N. Thomas Veatch and his followers in their struggle against the supremacy of the women voters."

And with one fair hand upon the marble shaft, a tall, a very tall woman, stands and weeps.

I see the gate to Hades and those about to enter. I recognize them—but it is growing dismal and dark, how I should, dislike to be caught out in the night, twenty years from home. So I am coming back, back through the years to the Class of 1909.
