How students link sports, school image

A study by Aaron Clopton, KU associate professor of health, sport and exercise science and director of the Laboratory for the Study of Sports Management, shows that success in all sports can play a role in how college students think people perceive the academic excellence of their school, but football and men’s basketball do not.

Full Story

2012 Chancellor’s Student Awards

KU has honored 10 students with 2012 Chancellor's Student Awards as part of the 140th Commencement. The awards recognize students' academic, volunteer and leadership accomplishments during their time at KU.

Full Story

KU to honor outstanding teachers

Six faculty members — three from the Lawrence campus and three from KUMC — will be honored at Commencement for outstanding work in the classroom during the 2011-12 academic year with distinguished teaching awards.

Full Story

Byrd Graduate Educator Award

Steven Barlow, professor in the Department of Speech-Language-Hearing: Sciences and Disorders at KU, is the 2012 recipient of the Louise Byrd Graduate Educator Award. The award will be presented May 12.

Full Story

Math students win state contest

KU math students won the team competition as well as individual awards at the eighth Kansas Collegiate Math Competition, which was April 14 at Kansas State University.