

Religion's role in 'Naismith's Game'

A KU religious studies associate professor who explores the junctures of religion and sports is examining the influence of religion on James Naismith, his creation of basketball and the commemoration of his legacy. Michael Zogry, who directs KU's Indigenous Studies program in addition to teaching religious studies, will be on sabbatical leave next fall to work on a book to be titled "Religion and Basketball: Naismith's Game."
