High honors for science fiction writing

Kij Johnson, assistant professor of English at the University of Kansas, has won a Hugo Award, considered the most prestigious U.S. honor for science fiction writers. Johnson earned the majority vote among six nominees in the Best Novella category. Her work “The Man Who Bridged the Mist” also won the Nebula Award earlier this year.

TODAY’S HEADLINES

Dole Institute to host journalist

Sasha Issenberg, Slate journalist and author, will be at the Dole Institute of Politics at the University of Kansas discussing his latest book, “The Victory Lab: The Secret Science to Winning Campaigns” in a Dole Forum event at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 23. It is free and open to the public.

Hilltop celebration, fundraiser set

Hilltop Childhood Development Center is celebrating its 40th anniversary with a fundraiser at 7 p.m. Oct. 20. The event will feature refreshments and live and silent auctions. All proceeds benefit Hilltop.

TODAY’S EVENTS

CAMPUS LIFE

Murder Mystery Dinner
Oct. 16
6:30-8 p.m.
Kansas Union, Ballroom

TODAY’S EVENTS

CAMPUS LINKS

Chancellor’s messages
Provost e-news
KUMC leadership messages
KUMC
KU Alumni Association
Edwards Campus
Kansas Public Radio

KU IN THE NEWS

Forbes (October 16, 2012)
Decoding A Great Earth Die-Off: Was A Gamma-Ray Burst Really The Trigger?

CONN

connect.ku.edu