Magazines and the 'gospel of good health'

Mass magazines are one of the best ways to get health information to women, yet they remain a largely untapped medium for communicating health news and information to African-American women in particular. A KU professor has published a study showing that articles about health issues that largely affect African-American women are underreported in such magazines, especially those that contain a spiritual or religious element.

Full Story

TODAY'S HEADLINES

KU launches RedTire program
KU's School of Business has launched a new program, Redefining Retirement, designed to keep rural businesses open by matching qualified graduates interested in owning a business with current owners looking to retire.

Full Story

$1M gift for physiology chair
Jim Osborn, of Honolulu, has given $1 million to create the Kathleen M. Osborn Chair in Molecular and Integrative Physiology in his daughter's memory. Paul Cheney is the inaugural recipient.

Full Story

CAMPUS NEWS

Town hall for Shared Service Centers
A Changing for Excellence Town Hall on KU's plan for Shared Service Centers will be 9:30 a.m. Thursday, June 28, in the Pharmacy Building, Room 2020. The meeting will be streamed live at cfe.ku.edu, and KU Transit is running extra buses all morning to and from West Campus.

Full Story

Pharmacy names new associate dean
Brian J. Barnes is the new associate dean for academic affairs at KU's School of Pharmacy, the school announced Monday. He holds two faculty appointments, one with the Department of Pharmacy Practice and one within KU's School of Medicine.

Full Story

CONNECT

Twitte
Kansas Summer Theatre will stage the popular Broadway musical "My Fair Lady" July 12-22 in the Crafton-Preyer Theatre. Performances are at 7:30 p.m. July 12-14 and 19-21, and at 2:30 p.m. Sundays, July 15 and 22.

Full Story

Honors for wastewater work

A unique research project designed to remove potentially harmful nutrients from wastewater while creating an alternative fuel source has earned national recognition for Belinda Sturm, assistant professor of civil, environmental and architectural engineering.

Full Story

KLETC honors June graduates

Forty-three new law enforcement officers graduated June 15 from the Kansas Law Enforcement Training Center, representing 34 municipal, county and state law enforcement agencies across the state.

Full Story