Researchers in the Women's Pain Division of KU's Institute for Neurological Discoveries have done pioneering work on how estrogen contributes to migraines. Now a group of researchers has published a paper in January's Journal of Neuroscience that establishes a link between estrogen and pelvic pain.

Research links estrogen, pelvic pain

Full Story

TODAY'S HEADLINES

KU names engineering dean

Michael Branicky will be the new dean of the School of Engineering, KU announced Wednesday. He currently serves as professor and chair in the Department of Electrical Engineering and Computer Science at Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland.

Full Story

Help for creative students

A KU professor has published a paper showing that profiles she created can identify bright, creative kids and also help set them on the path to being the nation’s next innovators, creators, inventors and artists.

Full Story

Theatre’s 'Alums Come Home’

The Department of Theatre and University Theatre expect more than 120 alumni to return to campus Feb. 28-March 2 for the sixth edition of “Alums Come Home.” The turnout is the biggest so far in the series. Multiple performances are planned.

Full Story

TODAY'S EVENTS

LECTURE

'Aristotle on Belief and Knowledge'
Thursday, Feb. 28, 2013
5:30 p.m.- 7 p.m.
Kansas Union Centennial Room
View all events

TWITTER

@kugrads Tomorrow is the deadline for undergrads to complete the Application for Graduation (AFG). For info visit http://bit.ly/XFaBQl #KUGrads
View all tweets

FEATURED MULTIMEDIA
Cory Doctorow to visit KU tonight

Author, journalist, technology activist and Boing Boing co-editor Cory Doctorow will present the Richard W. Gunn Memorial Lecture at 7:30 p.m. today in Alderson Auditorium in the Kansas Union.

Full Story