Shaping policy for endangered ecosystems

Remote-sensing techniques first honed to track agricultural production and land-cover changes in America’s heartland now are enabling scientists and policymakers to grasp ecological degradation under way in the Cerrado, the second-largest geographical region in Brazil. A KU researcher from the Department of Geography and others are conducting research funded by the National Science Foundation.

Full Story

NIH aids KUMC research

What does Nancy Kassebaum Baker, former U.S. senator from Kansas, have to do with laser technology housed on the third floor of a KU Medical Center research building? More than you might think.

Full Story

Gift made for scholarship halls

In appreciation of his experiences as a scholarship hall resident, KU alumnus John Regier, Belmont, Mass., has made a $40,000 gift to provide lasting support for the halls.

Full Story

Class of 2013 University Awards

Nominations are due Friday, Feb. 1, for Class of 2013 University Awards, which recognize students who embody service excellence, dedication and/or stellar academic achievement.

Full Story
Law enforcement trainees graduate

The Kansas Law Enforcement Training Center, a division of KU Continuing Education, recently graduated 58 new officers representing 41 municipal, county and state agencies.

Full Story