Bringing childbirth techniques to Uganda

No roads. No electricity. No gloves: This is the landscape of the northern Ugandan countryside, where 16 KU nursing students and faculty traveled in June to train health workers in a special childbirth technique called Helping Babies Breathe. Martha Baird, assistant professor in the School of Nursing, led the trip, which also included colleagues from Research College of Nursing and Johnson County Community College.

Full Story

TODAY'S HEADLINES

KPR to switch 90.3 program streams

KANQ, 90.3 FM, Kansas Public Radio’s 17,000-watt transmitter in Chanute, will switch from KPR2, a news-talk format, to KPR’s main signal, carrying NPR news, classical music, jazz and listener favorites from NPR like “Car Talk,” “A Prairie Home Companion” and others.

Full Story

Musicians will perform at Carnegie

The School of Music has announced its 2012-13 Concert Series, including a performance of KU's Wind Ensemble to perform the world premiere of Mohammed Fairouz’s “In the Shadow of No Towers” at Carnegie Hall.

Full Story

TODAY'S EVENTS

SEMINAR

“Re-imagining Environmental Justice Globally and Locally: A View from Nigeria”
Friday, Aug. 31, 2012
3:30 p.m.-5 p.m.
Hall Center for the Humanities
View all events

TWEETER

@doleinstitute We join w/ those around the country in lowering our flag to half-staff to honor Neil Armstrong
1.usa.gov/Q7x98k
View all tweets

FEATURED MULTIMEDIA
New Staff Fellows named

KU Provost Jeff Vitter has announced the 2012-13 class of Staff Fellows. The program, now in its fifth year, is jointly coordinated by the Office of the Provost and Human Resources and will feature 13 participants.

Full Story