Project on the History of Black Writing

REPORT: SPECIAL
35TH ANNIVERSARY EDITION

2015-2017
University of Kansas
Lawrence, Kansas
The Project on the History of Black Writing, founded in 1983 at the University of Mississippi, Oxford, at University of Kansas since 1998, has promoted research and inclusion in higher education for 35 years. Guided by a collaborative work model, HBW is best known for literary recovery and preservation; digital scholarship and access; professional development and curriculum innovation; and public humanities programming. The project staff is composed entirely of undergraduate and graduate students.

ADVISORY BOARD

Kathleen Bethel, Northwestern University
Daryl C. Dance, University of Richmond
Amy Earhart, Texas A&M
Ayesha Hardison, University of Kansas
Howard Rambsy II, Southern Illinois University Edwardsville
Kenton Rambsy, University of Texas Arlington
Joyce Scott, Wheelock College
Doretha Williams, The National Museum of African American History and Culture

2016 Staff & Affiliates – L to R – Anthony Boynton, Maryemma Graham, Wei Wang, Danny Caine, Alysha Griffin, Arnab Chakraborty, Matthew Broussard, Connor Noteboom, Crystal Bradshaw, Jennifer Wilmot, Mona Ahmed, William Cunningham, Hui Meng
W.W. (HBW) D? That is, What Would the Project on the History of Black Writing (HBW) Do? It’s one of the questions I posed three years ago here at Southern Illinois University Edwardsville, shortly after we hired a new junior faculty member who would cover African American literature courses along with another junior colleague and me. For the first time, our department was employing three specialists in African American literary studies all at the same time. We could, as we were being employed to do, merely teach our assigned courses. Or, we could cover the courses and also take some ideas from Maryemma Graham’s HBW playbook, which would empower us to move in some additional directions.

And who better to borrow from that playbook than me? After all, I have been contributing to HBW projects for over a decade now, and during that time, I have studied and posed countless questions about the workings of HBW to Graham, her long-time and trusted Grants Coordinator Sarah Arbuthnot Lendt, and the many professors and graduate students who collaborated on projects over the years. Indeed, an HBW way of being in the world had already been thoroughly integrated into my thinking and practices by the summer of 2014, when I began plotting my next series of moves.

Shortly after my newest colleague arrived, I convinced her and my other colleague to participate in weekly sessions focused on African American literary studies. Soon after we began meeting, the humanities librarian at our university heard about our sessions and asked to join us. Sure, of course. Since that time, each week for the last two academic years, our small collective has met to discuss African American literary studies, prepare internal and external grants, establish a dataset on the histories of black literary scholarship, organize public humanities activities, and brainstorm new projects. Our first co-written article “Building an African American Literary Studies Dataset” appeared in CLA Journal last fall, and just as important, grants that we secured made it possible for us to coordinate “language and leadership” conferences for area secondary school students as well as online reading programs for college students.

Why the public programs for secondary school and college students? That’s easy: such projects are from the HBW playbook. Why a dataset on the histories of black literary scholarship? It complements an ongoing project on the history of black writing. Why all the grants? Because that’s what HBW does. Why publish in CLA Journal? HBW has a longstanding commitment to the College Language Association, which produces the journal. Why the devotion to collaborative efforts and the weekly sessions to discuss African American literary studies and new projects? Well, HBW has been having a lively conversation about such matters for more than 30 years now, and we wanted to follow a wonderful, effective model.

Howard Rambsy II
HBW Advisory Board [Member since 2008]
Professor
Department of English, Language and Literature
Southern Illinois University Edwardsville
FROM THE HBW PLAYBOOK

Black Literary Suite: Taking Research to the Public

Since its inception in 2010, BLS has evolved into a multi-platform program with a themed exhibit, panels and discussions, films, and twitter chats. The goal is to bring increased public attention to lesser known aspects of literary history and culture. BLS exhibits can be viewed online: hwb.ku.edu/black-literary-suite

BLS Spring 2015 “Black Writers with a Kansas Connection”

BLS Fall 2017 “Reclaiming the Black Body: Women Writing Women”

BLS Spring 2017 KU premier of film Yazoo Revisited. David Rae Morris, Director.

BLS 2016 “Sports Figures with a Kansas Connection”

BLS Spring 2017 “Mississippi Renaissance”

BLS 2017 Co-Ordinators Morgan McComb (podium) and Anthony Boynton (left rear)
Black Book Interactive Project (BBIP): Diversifying the Digital Humanities

An NEH-start up grant, BBIP is developing a vocabulary for structuring texts—a metadata schema—that responds to the cultural and racial complexities within African American literature. A partnership with the University of Chicago’s Chicago Text Lab enabled the conversion of our African American Novel Collection to a digital file, which is also included in the American Novel Database Project. HBW initiated Digital Inclusion Network (DIGIN) to address the digital divide by identifying hidden collections and promoting digital literacy training inside and outside the academy. BBIP’s goal is to also analyze the durability, efficacy and relevance of existing digital tools for deepening our understanding of the significance of African American cultural heritage materials. Given ongoing and primary concern for recovering black writing, we run the risk of finding texts, only to have them disappear all over again because we don’t have working models that employ contemporary approaches, including data mining and visualization, for creating new knowledge.

Over a two year period, student teams at the University of Chicago and KU completed the scanning of nearly 1000 mostly underdiscussed novels by black writers. A second phase of the project has already begun to secure funding to (1) add additional content to the existing digital archive and complete the conversion to machine readable files enriched by descriptive metadata; (2) adopt and test a user interface developed by the UC team to enable greater access and discoverability; and (3) provide a series of intensive workshops to make BBIP available to a larger group of scholars, educators, and students currently outside of the digital community.
College Language Association: Preparing the Next Generation

2015  “Expanding Frontiers: Freedom, Resistance, and Transnational Identities in Languages and Literatures”

“Writing and Reading Beyond the Boundaries: CLA’s Next Generation”

2016  “Dialogues Between Africa and the African Diaspora in Languages, Literatures and Films”

“Reading & Writing the African/Diaspora: Africa and the Caribbean”

“What’s Race Got to Do with It? – Then and Now”

2017  “Agency, Artistry and Ambivalence in Black Literature and Expressive Culture: A Reading of Charles Chesnutt, the Harlem Renaissance and Beyoncé”

“The Eugene Redmond Effect: New Drum Voices” (Creative Writing Undergraduate Panel)
Black Poetry after the Black Arts Movement NEH Summer Institute: Scholarly Engagement and Professional Development

July 2015

- 40+ scholars identified trends and practices that derive from the Black Arts tradition
- 25 NEH Summer Scholars selected to participate
- “Poetry and Its Futures” panel forecast probable trajectories for poetry in the 21st century
- Public poetry readings by Kevin Young, Evie Shockley, William J. Harris, Harryette Mullen and Meta DuEwa Jones
- Documentary BaddDDD Sonia Sanchez (2015)
- Post-institute public webinars with a variety of inter-generational poets http://blackpoetry.ku.edu

Evie Shockley reading at the Raven Bookstore, Lawrence

NEH Summer Scholars with Institute staff and Visiting Scholars. First row: Sarah Arbuthnot Lendt (institute coordinator), Meta DuEwa Jones; M. Graham, Evie Shockley, Keith Leonard, Kristin Lockridge Coffey (assistant coordinator)
Beijing Foreign Studies University (BFSU): Internationalizing Our Work

Beginning in 2016, HBW hosted the annual KU-BFSU Summer Institute designed to provide an introduction to American higher education and America’s culturally diverse heritage. A partnership between KU and BFSU will allow this program to continue for at least 5 years.

July 2016 and July 2017

- BFSU graduate and undergraduate students, faculty and administrators
- Academic lectures in the disciplines of English Literature, American Studies, Business, African/African-American Studies and History
- Graduate Student Panel where KU students shared their experiences
- Sunday service at St. Luke African Methodist Episcopal Church
- Lawrence/Langston Hughes city tour with local historian
- Haskell (University) Cultural Center and Museum
- Nelson-Atkins Museum of Art and Spencer Museum of Art
- Lawrence Farmer's Market
- Campus and community music and theater events
- Multiple dinners and receptions with KU faculty, graduate students and administrators

The KU-BFSU Summer Institute was self-funded by BFSU. Support for hospitality was provided by various KU entities.

BFSU 2016 with KU Chancellor Bernadette Gray-Little. Dr. Frank Cai, faculty leader (left). Institute Staff: Sarah Arbuthnot-Lendt (3rd from left back row), Graham, (3rd from right, back row), Hui Meng (2nd from right, back row)

BFSU 2017 with HBW staff, students from Marla’s Textile Academy, and artist Faith Ringgold. The first national African American Quilt Convention was organized and hosted by the African American Quilt Museum and Textile Academy, Inc., Lawrence, KS.
Campus and Community Outreach

Funds permitting, HBW invites major artists and speakers to campus for a short residency, which includes a major lecture, workshops and visits to classes. We routinely provide support for other campus and community-sponsored conferences and events.

Topeka high school students meet with Kevin Powell, 2016

Nikki Giovanni, 2017, co-sponsored by the Office of Multicultural Affairs. Students from KU, Lawrence High School, and Free State High School

The African American Quilt Museum and Textile Academy held the first annual National African American Quilt Convention on July 12-15, 2017 in Lawrence, KS. Organized by artist Marla Jackson, the event drew a multitude of textile artists from across the country, sponsored workshops on fabric arts (including quilting and knitting) and held historic tours of Lawrence. Internationally renowned artist and quilter Faith Ringgold, gave the opening keynote address.

The Black Love Symposium held September 11-18, 2017, celebrating the 80th anniversary of Zora Neale Hurston’s Their Eyes Were Watching God, included the “Soul of Zora” exhibit, featuring the work of local quilters; and a marathon reading of the novel around town.

Diverse Academic Careers Workshop for CLAS graduate students at the Hall Center September 15, 2017 as part of KU’s Black Love Symposium. Participants (left to right) 1st row: Igor Ristic, N.Y. Nathiri, Maryemma Graham, Morgan McComb, 2nd row: Simone Savannah, Ogouchuiku Ngwudike, Sarah Polo, Stefanie Torres-Maksimowicz, Casey Keel, 3rd row: Shelia Bonner, Mercedes Lucero, Kate Nygren, Leannah Dicks, Christopher Peace, Giselle Anatol with N.Y. Nathiri, Executive Director, Association for the Preservation of the Eatonville Community.
FINANCIAL REPORT

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Funding</th>
<th>2015</th>
<th>2016</th>
<th>2017</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>University of Kansas</td>
<td>$25,000</td>
<td>$25,000</td>
<td>$25,000</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Summer Salary Funds¹</td>
<td>$-</td>
<td>$2,000</td>
<td>$17,493</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>TOTAL²</td>
<td>$25,000</td>
<td>$27,000</td>
<td>$42,493</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Funds are spent on student salaries; travel; fees; hospitality; postage; printing and advertising; and contracts and services.

Black Book Interactive Project ³

- Salaries & Fringe, $27,693
- KU Facilities & Administration, $6,163
- Travel, $3,322
- Other Expenses, $2,822

Total Grant Funding: $40,000

---

1. Maryemma Graham reserves a portion of her annual salary to fund HBW work during the summer months.
2. HBW also has an endowment supported by the Advisory Board. The average balance for fiscal years 2015-2017 was $8,887.
3. Project Dates 4/1/16 to 2/28/18
4. Project Dates 10/1/14 to 2/29/16
5. NEH generally does not permit grant funds be spent on food, drink or hospitality (one working lunch allowed). $3,900 in combined funds were contributed by various KU entities to provide several group meals and daily coffee service.
STAFF 2017-2018

Dr. Maryemma Graham, Founder/Director, mgraham@ku.edu
Mona Ahmed, Communications Specialist, undergraduate Journalism major, monaahmed@ku.edu
Sarah Arbuthnot Lendt, Grants Development Coordinator, saraharbuthnot@hotmail.com
Anthony Boynton, Black Literary Suite Co-Coordinator, PhD student, English, adboynton@ku.edu
Kyndall Delph, Special Project, undergraduate English major, kyn_delph@ku.edu
Arnab Chakraborty, Black Book Interactive Project Coordinator, PhD student, English, a643c834@ku.edu
Morgan McComb, Black Literary Suite Co-Coordinator, MA student, English, mlmccomb@ku.edu
Hui Meng, Affiliate, PhD, Post Doctoral Scholar, janemh@ku.edu
Vince Omni, Acquisitions, MFA student, English, vinceomni@ku.edu
Shih Yen Pan, BFSU Staff Assistant (summer only), undergraduate Mathematics and Sociology major, Shihyenpan@ku.edu
Christopher Peace, Black Book Interactive Project Research Assistant, PhD student, English, c486p114@ku.edu
Jennifer Wilmot, Project Coordinator, PhD student, Educational Leadership/Policy Studies, jmwilmot@ku.edu
Hui Xu, Visiting Scholar, kathyxh@ku.edu

VISION

To become the premiere enterprise for the reclamation of literary contributions by people of African descent in the United States to world culture. To keep before the public the works of African American authors and encourage scholarship in little explored or unexplored areas.

MISSION

To identify and advocate for the return of “fugitive texts” that have been lost to history; to promote the awareness of and create opportunities for learning about and engaging the works produced by African American authors; and to promote the development of scholarship on literature by African Americans.

GOALS

To create by 2015 a robust database of published fiction by African Americans; to secure permanent support for the Project; to promote an awareness of African American authors through teacher institutes, online and print publications, and presentations at conferences, book clubs and other venues.

Adopted at 2009 Meeting of the Advisory Board