

Teaching modules on historical practice

Finding Your State Standards

For teaching this lesson, it is important teachers familiarize themselves with their particular state's history/social studies standards.

- Searching “(state name) standards for history” will usually direct to the right location but additional helpful keywords to search for are: framework and crosswalksThe location of state standards online can shift so make sure you are searching for the most updated content
- Standards are typically found on the state's department of education or connected education agency's website
- Some standards are webpages, while others can also be downloaded as PDFs
- Some state departments of education organize and present their standards on a single webpage, whereas others sometimes require clicking through multiple landing pages
- Different states will use “standards for history,” “standards for social studies,” or a combination of “standards for history and social studies”