Articles:

Indigenous Nations Studies Journal uses a double blind review process. We initially require two hard copies of the manuscript. If your manuscript is accepted, we will require a copy in a pc-compatible word-processing format or file (not change the file format to HTML or web page) sent as an email attachment as arranged with the Associate Editor. No other formatting changes should be made to the file. Articles should be 25-30 pages, double-spaced, endnotes must be used instead of footnotes and all bibliographic citations must be complete before submittal. Manuscripts must be submitted with an abstract of approximately 100 words. Articles should be based on original work and primary research data. Manuscripts cannot be returned. Contributors are asked not to put their names on the manuscript. Contributors agree upon submission that manuscripts submitted to Indigenous Nations Studies Journal shall not be submitted for publication elsewhere while under review by Indigenous Nations Studies Journal.

Book Reviews:

Books chosen for review should be approved by the Indigenous Nations Studies office before submittal. Reviews should contain approximately 400 words and also be double-spaced. Reviews should be submitted in one of three formats: on a pc-compatible word-processing format, on a 3 ½” floppy disk, a paper copy, or sent via email as arranged with the Associate Editor.

A NOTE FROM THE EDITOR

This special issue is an updated collection of information about active American Indian, Native American and Indigenous Studies programs in the United States. One survey identified as many as 112 such programs and departments in both the United States and in Canada, of which 84 are in the U.S. A call for essays was put out and the following essays were submitted. The Indigenous Nations Studies Journal is open to receiving other program/department essays for future issues of the Journal.

This issue of the journal was made possible with the assistance of Viv Ibbett, Willow Getting, Denise Lajetta, Michael Stewart, and Paula Courtney, College of Liberal Arts & Sciences Word Processing Center, in addition to the Editor, Associate Editor, and Book Review Editor. Thank you.
