Statement:

I returned to my hometown in China last summer for the first time since 2018 to visit my grandparents. In my absence, my grandmother was diagnosed with Alzheimer's. She lies in bed, often confused, her moments of clarity rare. During my visit, she recognized me and tightly held my hand, a moment I captured through prints made on handmade paper from my childhood bedsheets. With the fact that I am now living on the other side of the planet, I can't see her often. Meanwhile, she may not always remember me. We might lose connection at a point.
